Garden State greets. President Woodrow Wilson and Bruce Springsteen grace the New Jersey mosaic in the lobby of the Aletha R. Wright Administration Building on Market Street in Camden. The mosaic was created by a group of young people as part of NetworkArts, a Philadelphia educational program. The group has mosaics at the Franklin Institute, the Philadelphia Zoo and other venues.

Portraits of N.J.'s best and brightest

Wesley Perez, 18, helps unveil the mosaic that he helped work on at the Wright Building. The mural honors the state of New Jersey and features some of its most famous residents and sights.

Walt Whitman, who lived in Camden and is buried there, is among those depicted.

Paul Robeson, the singer, actor, athlete and activist born in Princeton, in mosaic form.
